Absences: Language learning requires greater participations in the classroom than most other subjects in the university curriculum. Students are expected to attend ALL classes. Students are allowed to miss three instructional hours during one semester without grade penalty.

Absences beyond three instructional hours will result in a grade penalty of 2% per class. Additional absences can be considered by the department only with proper documentation of attested medical needs for which a doctor's note will be required, and with the possibility of a tutoring requirement to preclude class disruption for other students.

Class Etiquette: While in the language class, students are expected to pay attention and not distract other students with disruptive activities. This includes newspaper reading, conversation unrelated to class, eating, text messaging, and the like. Those who come late or who are disruptive in class will be docked one percentage (out of the 100%) per incident. Persistently disruptive students will be dealt with through the university disciplinary system.

Plagiarism constitutes using others' ideas, words or images without properly giving credit to those sources. If you turn in any work with your name affixed to it, your instructor assumes that work is your own. If you work with a tutor on home work assignments, you need to indicate it.

Final exams: NELC language courses comply with the OSU Final Examination Policy and schedule. Students are responsible for checking the dates and times of final exams before registering for classes. The date of the final exam for NELC language classes is also printed on the class syllabus. Requests for changes are considered only in compliance with OSU policy which states in the event of more than three exams in one day, the instructor/ department of the fourth and subsequent exam is obligated to adjust the student's exam time, provided the student notifies them by the midpoint of the semester. A student who has passing grade and fails to attend the final exam for reasons that could not be anticipated and that were beyond the student's control, should discuss the absence with the NELC department chair. The chair may require a student to file a written explanation of the absence for review and fact checking by the dean of students committee on absence. The final decision in the dispensation of these matters remains with the NELC chair; there is no guarantee a grade of incomplete will be granted.

Auditing: The department of Near Eastern Languages does not allow editing of language courses.

Incompletes are not given in NELC language courses. Any inquiries must be addressed to NELC chair directly.

If you are a native speaker of the language or you are a citizen of a country where the language is commonly spoken, or you graduated a high school in that country, Ohio State University and departmental policy may or may not prohibit you from enrollment in this language class. Please direct all related questions to the department of near eastern languages.

Disabilities Services for Students (see OSU Bulletin,): The office of disability services for students provides services and referrals for students with disabilities. Academic accommodations and other services are provided on an individual basis as determined by documented need. Accommodations and services, available for qualified students, include letters faculty, tests accommodations, etc.

Language Program Supervision NELC departmental policy restricts the kinds of decisions that language instructors are authorized to make. Any exceptions to all aspects of NELC language courses have to go through official departmental channels, which start with the NELC Language coordinator. Any request for exceptions must be documented in writing even though it is made through the proper channels.
